THE FESTIVAL

Each October, more than 190 leading artists nationwide turn Bethesda Row's Arts and Entertainment District into an outdoor art gallery, featuring juried fine arts and fine crafts. "Art Fair Sourcebook" has recognized the Bethesda Row Arts Festival (BRAAF) as one of the top 30 Fine Art Shows in the United States, attracting 25,000 art patrons over the two-day event.

Bethesda Row, just outside of Washington, DC, features more than 50 fine shops, upscale galleries and unique restaurants with outdoor seating. A few short blocks from the Metro, and on the Capital Crescent Trail, the area is accessible to the entire region by subway, bus, car and bike.

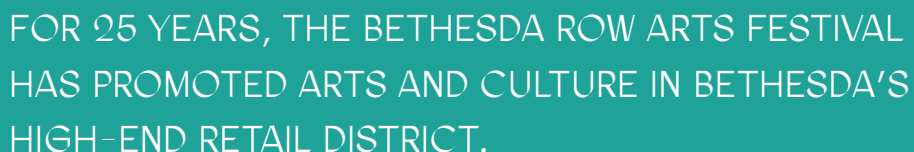

WHO ATTENDS

The Festival attracts 25,000 high income attendees come from the Washington, DC Metro Area, and the surrounding suburbs of Bethesda, Chevy Chase and Upper Northwest. The three mile radius around the Festival has an average household income of $196,910, making it one of the nation's most affluent and educated art marketplaces.

The event is promoted through a targeted and integrated marketing plan, which includes a comprehensive social media and internet campaign, magazine and newspaper advertising, postcards and posters, and radio promotion.
